

Elements of the Portfolio: Governance and Enforcement, 2014-2016

Global and Cross-Cutting Grants

The International Migration Initiative 2014-2017 strategy was built around three areas of work: Labor, Governance, and Enforcement. IMI's work was organized around a combination of these, along with three geographic migration corridors: Asia-Middle East, Central Asia-Russia, and Central America-Mexico. This portfolio review will look at the Governance and Enforcement work taking place either at the global level or cutting across a range of geographies. IMI's 2016-19 strategy has combined these two portfolios into a single category of work, Migration Policy and Enforcement.

Corridor-based Grants

The corridor-based grants below contain elements of Governance and Enforcement. Many grantees in the corridors address issues of policy and practice related to two or more of IMI’s strategic areas. In the budgeting processes in 2014 and 2015, IMI estimated how much would be spent in the three strategic areas in each corridor. However, until 2016, we did not have the budget tools to accurately document and track exact proportions of each grant allocated to individual categories of work. The grants below have been reviewed as part of previous Presidential-level portfolio reviews of the Central Asia-Russia and Central America-Mexico corridors, and IMI will continue to review work as organized around strategic corridors at the board and staff level.
